Preparing the Project Proposal

The proposal and application are the first formal submissions of the Honors in the Discipline process. The proposal should be a narrative description of the intended project they plan to conduct, under the mentorship of an approved faculty member. The proposal should be no longer than 10 double-spaced pages and should include the following

- A detailed description of the project: Provide an overview of the proposed project, clearly stating the type or form of the project (e.g., research project, creative endeavor, entrepreneurship). This summary should be written for a general audience as it may appear on a website of current Honors in the Discipline projects.
- Objectives, Rationale, and Significance: Briefly state your aims or objectives for this project. Explain the significance or importance of your project. Why is it important to seek the answer to the questions you are posing through your scholarship? What can potentially be learned through your inquiry or creation?
- Expected Results: Explain what outcomes your project is expected to produce. How will you know if your project produces these outcomes?
- Anticipated Impact: How do you expect the results or outcomes of your project to make a difference?
- Dissemination Plan: How will you communicate the results of your project to university or public audiences?
- Timeline: Provide a clear schedule by which you will complete various stages of the project.
- Preliminary literature review: Provide sample scholarly materials that you will consult to prepare to conduct your project. If appropriate, the literature review should simply include citations of work you intend to consult.
